Workshop Description:

A one-day workshop on the assessment and rehabilitation of groundwater production wells in order to maintain optimum performance and efficiency. Attendees will learn how to recognize the symptoms of underperforming wells, causes of well plugging, planning a rehabilitation strategy and methods used to improve and restore well performance. Topics presented will include economic considerations for rehab projects, physical, chemical, and biological clogging mechanisms, preparing and executing a well rehabilitation plan, application of physical and chemical rehab techniques, and lessons learned using case studies. By attending this workshop, participants will learn strategies for extending the life expectancy and maintaining optimum efficiency of their production wells.
